Helping Your Clients Make the Move to eCommerce

The positions we hold often give the unsuspecting Internet entrepreneur the idea that we are the best initial contact when considering the world of eCommerce. They focus their thoughts on shopping carts, HTML code and Service Level Agreements. Our NEW job is to inform them that they need to first consider marketing, financing, staffing and order fulfillment before worrying about their Internet interface. Knowing the other factors they need to consider and helping them arrange all aspects of their new venture presents an amazing opportunity for you to move into this market and provide a service that will be very valuable (to you and your client).

I can't participate in eCommerce because I do not know how to create a web site!

Well...did the owner of the corner store do his own plumbing & electrical work?

Marketing

- Marketing budget?
- Search engines will NOT do the job alone!
- Click-thru banners OK, but expensive and not worth money
- Conventional marketing still the best way to spread the word about web site
- Consult a professional marketing firm
